travelling when first asked the million dollar question, "What is the next big thing?" we were certain that travelling, alongside happiness and fun (see textile View Issue No. 49), would be the key directions. As we planned this new concept, it felt almost as if we were preparing for a trip ourselves. We mapped out our route quite carefully. So what happens when you travel? Very often, accidental or coincidental happenings turn out to be the most memorable parts of your journey, whether good or bad. What else stays in your memory when we travel? Of course, there is the lingering taste of food and wine, since the most common activities we partake of on holidays are relaxing and eating! Then there is the sightseeing. That is why we have chosen to rediscover the meaning of architecture. On our trip, we visit everything from airports to flea markets, and became increasingly interested in structure as a concept. The structure and design of anything – the architecture of the universe.

We are entering a season of total relaxation. We will have time to tune in and listen. Listening to our inner voice telling us to slow down in order to enjoy and digest.
